Pageant Pointers

Suggested By: Past Orange Queen Royalty

POINTERS TO CONTESTANTS: "What to Do"

1.) The Plaquemines Parish Fair and Orange Festival Queens Selection is an opportunity for the young women of Plaquemines Parish to showcase their passion for the citrus industry, Plaquemines Parish, and its people.

2.) Understand the pageant system you have chosen. This pageant is less focused on “glitz and glamour” and more focused on preparing young ladies to become the next ambassador to the Fair and Orange Festival and represent our industries and parish throughout the state of Louisiana.

3.) Do not personalize judges’ scores. Spend your time and energy making YOU the best you can be! Consider judge’s feedback the opportunity to grow.

4.) Understand that you are your own competition. Do not allow yourself to be intimidated by others and do not try to intimidate them.

a. Be a good competitor as well as a good winner. Investigate your strong and weak points while showing good sportsmanship.

5.) Be sure to dress your best. If you find something questionable, please do not hesitate to reach out to one of the Orange Festival personal listed above. Choose colors and clothing that enhances your natural beauty.

7.) Accessories are to enhance the pageant ensemble, not to take away from it:

a. Interview: small pearl, gold, silver, or rhinestone jewelry is appropriate

b. Onstage: choose jewelry that helps you sparkle in the stage lights

8.) Interview:

a. Go over your application and be able to talk about what you wrote. (i.e.: Activities, Hobbies, Future plans)

b. Know what you are running for:

i. Have knowledge of the fair or festival.

ii. Have knowledge of the area.

iii. Have knowledge of your responsibilities and duties if chosen queen.

c. Know current events:

i. President, Vice-President, Governor, Mayor, Parish President, Council Members, School, Superintendent, School Board Members, and other Parish and State elected Officials, etc.

ii. Know important issues in your area, parish, state & country.

d. In interview, taupe shoes make the legs look longer and do not distract from the interview suit or you.

e. Your suit should not be too short, too long, too tight, too baggy, or not be age appropriate. You want to look as polished as possible.

f. Enter the interview room with a smile, greet the judges with a genuine "Hello". When greeting judges, do what feels natural. Consider you're greeting, whether it be a hand shake or a simple "good morning", walk in with a confident smile leaving a lasting impression.

g. Good posture is important! Keep your back straight, sit on the edge of your chair, and do NOT cross at the knee, cross at the ankles.

h. Look the judges in the eye. Good eye contact is an important part of a successful interview.

k. It is okay for a contestant to use her hands to show expression:

- i. When seated, the hands are at ease in the lap--not clenched or pulling at clothes.
- ii. The hands may be used for emphasis or expression, but not too much.

l. Speak clearly and confidently and let your eyes speak to the judges. You must be "real" not fake or rehearsed.

m. When answering the questions, keep the following in mind:

- i. Listen to the question completely before answering.
- ii. Speak confidently when answering your question.
- iii. Project your voice when speaking.
- iv. Articulate your answers well.
- v. When answering, find the balance. You do not want to ramble, but you want to provide enough information to show that you are knowledgeable about the topic.

vi. Do not "fake" answers--it is okay to admit that you do not know something. This is an opportunity to show your personality. (ex. I don't know, but I'll find out the minute this interview is over!)

9.) EVENING GOWN:

a. Some prefer to wear clear acrylic shoes with their evening gowns and others prefer sparkly nude pumps. Your main focus should be your ability to walk with ease across the stage. Wear whatever shoes that make you feel the most confident.

b. Be sure to practice in the shoes you plan to wear on selection night, so your walk looks natural. Stand tall with confidence and make eye contact with the judges.

c. Be sure to wear appropriate undergarments. Keep in mind that you will be under heavy spot lights.

c. Remember the 3- P's:

POISE

PERSONALITY

PROJECTION

Remember, have fun and be nice to everyone you meet. You never know who your judge will be! We hope these suggestions will be helpful to you, the contestant. Always remember -- BE YOURSELF, and SMILE!

Early History of Citrus In Plaquemines Parish

The first citrus in Louisiana were brought in by the Jesuits who were granted a tract of land in 1727. In Plaquemines Parish, the first record of citrus was at Fort Mississippi an early Spanish Fort located near present day Carlisle. It was during this same period that missionaries were also establishing citrus trees in California and Florida.

For many years early settlers grew the citrus trees for home use. In about 1850, several orange groves in the area produced such an abundant crop that the surplus could be sold at market in New Orleans. From this small beginning, the citrus industry expanded and soon thrived.

New varieties of citrus were soon tried and developed, Louisiana is often credited as the first grower of the mandarin in the United States. The mandarin was first raised at a site near the present Naval Station in Algiers. The satsuma, kumquat and tangerine were introduced to our region by the Italian Consul around this time also. Since that time other varieties such as the oranges, lemons and grapefruits have been successfully grown in Plaquemines Parish.

The citrus trees of today differ greatly from its early day predecessor. The first trees were grown from seedlings, which were thorny and produced fruit of widely varying quality. In addition, these trees would grow to a height over 30 feet making harvesting difficult. Production did not start until seven or ten years after planting and then sporadically.

Since that time, through the research of other states and the Louisiana State University Experimental Station located in Port Sulphur, LA, fruit production has increased in amount and quality. Today, the citrus is a thornless prolific, compact tree that is produced from budding. Fruit production starts with two or three years with a good uniform quality highly desirable by many markets. This acceleration in citrus growth was fueled by the art of budding as a means of plant propagation.

By taking a bud from one tree and grafting in onto the rootstock of another, growers seek to combine the best and most desirable qualities of each. Through bedding, researchers and growers have developed improved citrus varieties that have more fruit and extended growing periods.

An industry of producing nursery stock soon developed. Plaquemines citrus stocks are shipped throughout the south. Research continues in an effort to produce citrus that are cold resistant and in finding methods to protect against freeze damage. Whatever the reason the combination of soil nutrients, warm and citrus, the final result is a fruit that cannot be duplicated elsewhere.

History of Navels

The mainstay of the parish citrus industry is the Louisiana Washington Navel orange, famous for its taste and juice content. It originated in Bahia, Brazil, in the early part of the 19th Century. It was a bud-sport or mutation from the selecta orange, which is a seedless variety similar to our common Valencia. It was found propagating in 1820 in Bahia by a Portuguese gardener. It was introduced in the US in 1838 by a wealthy Scotch planter to the southern part of Florida. There is no written history as to what happened in this planting. A few years later Mr. William Saunders, a horticulturist of the United States Plant Office which later developed into the Department of Agriculture, planted several trees in the government nursery in Washington, D.C. Mr. Sanders sent two of these trees to Mrs. Luther Tibbets, Riverside, California. So far as known, the entire population of the Washington Navel came from these two trees. There is no record of who introduced the navel orange into Louisiana but it probably came here from California. The navel orange was first called the Bahia because it originated from the city of the same name in Brazil.

In the early days of this variety it was also referred to as the Washington Orange because it came to California from Washington, D.C

Later by mutual agreement, the name was changed to the Washington Navel. (The name "Navel" was given to it since the blossom end of the fruit resembles the human navel.)

The navel is a seedless variety that ripens in November. It makes a large fruit with a thin skin. It has deep orange color and is very attractive. It does not bear as heavy as sweet oranges or satsumas but, due to its flavor and heavy juice content, it demands the best price on the market today. It contains no seeds and the tree grows large, reaching a height of 30 feet. In 1960, about 35 percent of the parish production was navels. This percentage has increased markedly in recent years.

Other Varieties

Louisiana is the mother of the Mandarin in the United States and it is thought that the site of the first tree was near the present Navel Station in Algiers. Credit for introducing the Satsuma, Tangerine and Kumquat is given to the Italian Consul, although these came several years after the first Mandarin, probably about 1850.

Other citrus varieties grown in Plaquemines Parish today in lesser quality include Orlando, Tangelo, Robinson Tangerine, Owari and Armstrong's Early Satsumas; Louisiana Sweet, Plaquemines Sweet, Temple Murcot, Valencia and Mineola Tangelo – all oranges; Negami and Neiwa Kumquats; Meter Lemon; Ruby Red and Duncan Grapefruit.

There are different varieties of the following Citrus:

Grapefruit
Kumquat
Lemon
Louisiana Sweet Orange
Navel Orange
Mandarin
Pumpkin Mandarin
Satsuma
Tangerine
Tangelo

Calamondin - mostly used as an ornamental and mostly grown in Florida
